Introduction

Abandoned Property Advisors, LLC is the leading unclaimed property services provider offering communication, consulting and compliance services and programs to its institutional clients and consumers. APA is committed to using its best efforts to protect your privacy with technology that gives you the most powerful and safe online and commercial experience.

APA is subject to the investigatory and enforcement powers of the Federal Trade Commission (FTC). APA serves as a business associate for some clients, which may involve the use and disclosure of an individual's protected health information. As a business associate, APA complies with certain laws under the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act and the Health Information Technology for Economic and Clinical Health Act ("HIPAA Laws"). All protected health information is handled in accordance with the privacy and security protections afforded under the HIPAA Laws. APA's subsidiary, Keane Financial, LLC, is a licensed broker-dealer and subject to the laws, rules and enforcement powers of the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC").

This Privacy Policy includes Abandoned Property Advisors, LLC and Keane Financial, LLC . (collectively herein "APA") and applies to all personal information received by APA whether in electronic, paper or verbal format. This Privacy Policy also applies to the APA family of websites and governs general data collection and usage. By using the APA website and/or engaging APA's services, you consent to the data practices described in this Privacy Policy.

Purpose of Collection of your Personal Information and Legal Basis for Processing

Pursuant to contracts you enter into with APA, agreements you may already have in place with a financial institution or company holding your data, and/or APA's contracts with such companies, APA collects personally identifiable information, such as your e-mail address, name, home or work address, telephone number, and/or other personally identifiable information. APA also collects anonymous demographic information, which is not unique to you. The purpose of APA's collection and processing of this information is to assist a company holding your property in complying with federal or state law to locate you, verify your identity, and reunite you with your property; and/or going beyond such requirements when such efforts have not reached you. In addition, APA may collect personally identifiable information about you in order to determine if you are the correct entitled party where its client holds an asset registered to you or in the name of a deceased individual. Such collection is in furtherance of the legitimate business and fraud prevention interests of APA's clients.

There is also information about your computer hardware and software that upon your consent to the pop-up notification is automatically collected by APA's internet optimization vendor. This information can include: your IP address, browser type, domain names, access times and referring website addresses. This information is used by APA for the operation of this website, to maintain the quality of this website, and to provide general statistics regarding use of the APA website.

Please keep in mind that if you directly disclose personally identifiable information or personally sensitive data through public comments on APA blog posts, this information may be collected and used by others.

APA encourages you to review the privacy statements of websites you choose to navigate to through a link from APA's website so that you can understand how those websites collect, use and share your information. APA is not responsible for the privacy statements or other content on websites outside of the APA and APA family of websites.

Use and Storage of Your Personal Information

APA collects and uses your personal information to operate the APA Web site and to deliver the services you or a APA client have contracted with APA to receive. Where you provide consent pursuant to one of APA's pop-up notices, APA also uses your personally identifiable information to inform you of other products or services available from APA. APA may also contact you via surveys to conduct research about your opinion of current services or of potential new services that may be offered.

APA does not sell, rent or lease its customer lists to third parties. If this business practice changes in the future, APA will provide individuals with opt-out choice. APA may share data with vetted vendors to help us securely store and maintain data, perform statistical analysis, send you email or postal mail, provide customer support, or arrange for deliveries. All such third parties are prohibited from using your personal information except to provide these services to APA, and they are required to maintain the confidentiality of your information.

Upon consent pursuant to APA's pop-up notifications, APA keeps track of the websites and pages you visit within APA to determine what APA services are the most popular. This data is used to deliver customized content and advertising within APA to customers whose behavior indicates that they are interested in a particular subject area.

APA stores personal Information within the United States of America on servers under our own exclusive custody and control, in a data co-location to ensure disaster recovery and business continuity, and on WORM (write once, read many) compliant, encrypted back-up tapes maintained at a secure commercial storage facility. APA maintains a ten-year data retention policy in order to accommodate various United States' jurisdictions' audit review.

APA may be required to disclose an individual's personal information in response to a lawful request by public authorities, including to meet national security or law enforcement requirements. APA will disclose your personal information, without notice, if required to do so by law or in the good faith belief that such action is necessary to: (a) conform to the edicts of the law or comply with legal process served on APA or the website; (b) protect and defend the rights or property of APA; and (c) act under exigent circumstances to protect the personal safety of users of APA or the public.

Use of Cookies

As disclosed in the pop-up notifications provided upon you navigation to the APA websites, it uses "cookies" to help you personalize your online experience. A cookie is a text file that is placed on your hard disk by a web page server. Cookies cannot be used to run programs or deliver viruses to your computer. Cookies are uniquely assigned to you, and can only be read by a web server in the domain that issued the cookie to you. APA may use a vendor that provides the ability to identify you personally based on links you have clicked in emails or information you have submitted in online web forms and associate this information with certain cookies. APA may continue to receive information that identifies you and tracks your web page views as you view other websites that use these certain services.

One of the primary purposes of cookies is to provide a convenience feature to save you time. The purpose of a cookie is to tell the web server that you have returned to a specific page.

You have the ability to accept or decline cookies. Most web browsers automatically accept cookies, but you can usually modify your browser setting to decline cookies if you prefer. If you choose to decline cookies, you may not be able to fully experience the interactive features of APA's services or websites you visit.

Security of Your Personal Information

APA takes all reasonable steps to secure your personal information from unauthorized access, use or disclosure in a controlled, secure environment. When personal information is transmitted by APA, it is protected through the use of encryption, such as the Secure Socket Layer (SSL) protocol.

Rights of Personal Data Subjects

APA acknowledges the right of individuals to access their personal data. An individual who seeks access, or who seeks to correct, amend, limit use or delete inaccurate data, should direct his query to APA at onlinesubmissions@ap-advisors.com. If requested to remove data, we will respond within a reasonable timeframe to the extent that APA controls the data and can reasonably remove the same or is required to do so.

For personal data subject to the GDPR, you have the right to: (a) transfer personal data from one electronic processing system to another; (b) know what data has been collected about you and how such data has been processed; (c) make changes to inaccurate data; (d) to the extent that our retain of your data is in reliance on your consent to process your personal data, you have the right to withdraw your consent and ask for your personal data to be deleted, note that this does not apply to data that APA must maintain in order to fulfill its contractual obligations to the property holder.

Changes to this Privacy Policy

APA will occasionally update this Privacy Policy to reflect company and customer feedback. APA encourages you to periodically review this Privacy Policy to be informed of how APA is protecting your information.

Contact Information

APA welcomes your comments regarding this Privacy Policy. If you believe that APA has not adhered to this Privacy Policy, please contact APA at onlinesubmissions@ap-advisors.com. We will use commercially reasonable efforts to promptly determine and remedy the problem.

Privacy Complaints by European Union Residents

In compliance with the GDPR, APA commits to resolve complaints about your privacy and our collection or use of your personal information. European Union residents who were directly solicited by APA or a APA client for their personal information via solicitation to provide services in the EEA may lodge a complaint with a supervisory authority in the EU Member State of their residence, place of work, or where the alleged infringement occurred. We request that any concerns or complaints first be directed to APA so that we have an opportunity to resolve the issue. You can contact APA at:
